LOCAL MERCHANTS CONSIDER STREET WIDENING PLANS

The special committee appointed at the meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association held February 18, for the purpose of furthering the proposition of widening of Mission street and San Jose avenue, met last Wednesday at the San Francisco City Hall, in the committee rooms of the board of supervisors. All the committee were there to a man. John J. Fahey, chairman of the streets and highways committee of the Merchants' Association, whose name was overlooked last week through mistake, was added to the committee.

The committee organized by appointing Fred A. Steinman permanent chairman, and W. H. Clay, permanent secretary. It was then moved by Supervisor Andrew Gallagher that the secretary be instructed to write a letter to Govenor Rolph, and to the State Boad of Public Works, Division of Highways, and the director of highways, requesting an appointment for an early date at Sacramento. This motion was carried, and a large delegation of the committee and interested citizens will journey to the state capital in the interest of the proposed improvement.

Among those present were Supervisors Victor Canepa, Andrew Gallagher and Thomas Hickey, Andrew Vireno, Mayor H. H. Smith, Councilman Arthur Bodien, Angelo Olcese, G. Garibaldi, R. A. McNeil, Fred A. Steinman, W. J. Varley, Clyde Healey, George Kneese, C. A. Classen, John J. Fahey, and others.

Another meeting will be called as soon as word can be received from the governor. It certainly looks as though the committee means business and that Daly City and Colma will get speedy action on the proposition. This will be a great step forward, as it is expected that building operations will then move forward rapidly.

The next regular meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association will be held at the City Hall auditorium, Daly City, Wednesday, March 4, at 8 P. M., after which there will be refreshments.

W. H. CLAY, Recording Secretary.

ROBBERS OF GROCERY CAUGHT IN OAKLAND

The two daylight robbers who held up W. C. Walthers, proprietor of the Little-Mann Grocery, at 71 Templeton avenue, on Lincoln's birthday, at 6:45 P. M., have been captured. They took $110 from the cash register.

The youths are being held by the Oakland police. They are Joseph E. Robbins, aged 19, and Clarence E. Summers, aged 22. They are also wanted by the Oakland police, they having been connected with robberies in that city. They are being held under $10,000 bond.

COLMA POISON PLOT BEING INVESTIGATED BY OFFICERS

Deputies in the office of Sheriff J. J. McGrath are working on the case of poisoning attempted on ranch hands at the Louis Figone ranch at Colma. Two small bottles which were found, and which had contained the strychnine with which a cask of wine and a kettle of soup had been poisoned are being used by Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Neri in an attempt to locate the purchaser of the poison.

The first attempt to poison the ranch hands was made early last week when soup served at the ranch house proved to have a peculiar taste. It was thrown out and when four hogs and a dog ate the soup all died. This confirmed Figone's idea that the soup might have been poisoned, and he sent for Chief of Police Bellone and Constable A. S. Landini. When the officers of the law arrived they discovered that a cask of wine was also poisoned with strychnine. The bottle had been thrown into the cask, and was found inside, while the bottle believed to have contained the poison which had been added to the soup was found beneath the wine cask.

By means of these two small bottles the seheriff hopes to trace the purchaser of the poison.

Enjoy Annual Party

The annual get-together party of the employes of the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard was held at the home of Mayor H. H. Smith last Saturday. A most delicious dinner was served and greatly enjoyed by the following: Mayor and Mrs. H. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. E. Trier, John Matzek, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hopman, Antone Matzek, Gus Matzek, Loyal Ingersoll, Miss Evelyn Smith, Miss Irene Smith, Miss Edna Smith, Harold Purser, Hugh Smith, George Smith and Barbara Ford.

CAPTURE ROBBERS OF YOUNG COUPLE BY USE OF RADIO

Two youths, Howard Duin, 19, of 48 Rosemont avenue, and Albion Fletcher, 21, of 2422 Cole street, San Francisco, held up and robbed Ted W. Koerner, of 1001 Dolores street, San Francisco, and his companion, Miss Dorothy Brown, at the point of a revolver, last Sunday, on a lonely stretch of road near Salada Beach.

The youthful robbers drew up alongside Koerner's machine and ordered him to stop. One of the bandits then took the woman's purse, containing $18. Koerner was asked for his wallet, which contained $47. When he hesitated, one of the bandits said, "Let's kill him; he's too d—n slow." They made a similar threat against the young woman.

The fact that another motorist appeared on the scene is believed to have saved the lives of Koerner and his companion. The bandits, frightened at the approach of the other car, jumped into their own car and fled.

Koerner trailed the bandits for several miles along the Skyline boulevard until they turned off on a side road near the Harding golf course. He obtained the license number of their automobile, which he telephoned to San Francisco police upon reaching Fleishacker pool. The number and description was immediately broadcast, and members of the San Francisco auto detail, cruising in a radio-equipped car, trailed the bandits' car on Mission street. The youths surrendered without resistance. They confessed to the holdup and to stealing the car found in their possession, according to the police.

The youthful robbers have been lodged in jail at Redwood City, and will face a highway robbery charge.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT PRAISED BY COUNCIL

At the regular meeting of the City Council on Tuesday evening, February 24, the City Clerk was instructed to write the Crocker Estate Company a letter of appreciation for the good work they have done in cleaning up the road that circles the hill on the easterly boundary line of the Crocker Tract district. This road extends over into San Francisco in the Crocker-Amazon district.

The application of Mrs. J. Pitts for permission to erect a garage on the north line of Hilcrest Drive, 50 feet east of San Pedro avenue, was referred to the chief of police for investigation.

A communication was received from J. R. Perdu, asking the Council to defer action upon his application for a permit to erect a service supply station on the southeast corner of Mission and Gambetta streets, explaining that since the widening of Mission street is well on its way toward accomplishment, the present lines probably will be altered.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, who are endeavoring to form a Post in Daly City, asked permission of the City Council to use the City Hall on February 27, and on the second and fourth Friday of each month thereafter. The Council granted permission for temporary use only.

A letter of thanks was received from Station No. 3, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, for the $100 they received for services rendered duing 1930.

The Park Commission reported the work at the park was well under way, and that the unemployment situation is being taken care of.

Monthly bilsl were read and ordered paid.

MEMBERS OF UNIFORM RANK HOLD MEETING

The members of the uniform rank of the Veteran Firemen's Association held their regular meeting Friday, February 20, at the Veteran's building. The president called the attention of the members of the uniform rank to stand in readiness at all times and be prepared to answer a call from the president, especially when a Veteran fireman goes to his last resting place.

The members present had their drill and the maneuvers were perfect. The Chaplain took his place and all paid attention to his commands. Mayor H. H. Smith was present and took his position as Chaplain. Councilman J. Twesten was also present.

The members were well satisfied with the meeting, and hope that all members of the uniform rank will be present at the next regular meetings on the third Friday of each month. At the conclusion of the business session, refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

LOCAL LEGION POST PLANS ACTIVITIES

A number of veterans of the World war met last Tuesday night at the home of temporary Post Commander Dannenberg, 143 Winchester street. The meeting had been called to formulate plans for an intensive drive for membership in the American Legion Post, to be conducted before the charter closes.

Plans were also made for some of the activities to be conducted during the coming months, such as sponsoring a Boy Scout troop, forming an American Legion Junior baseball team, and establishing a Ladies' Auxiliary to the Daly City Post.

At the conclusion of the business meeting a delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Dannenberg, who also entertained the Veterans with a few French songs.

Regular meetings of the Daly City Post of the American Legion will be held at the City Hall on the first and third Friday of each month, when all veterans and the public will be made welcome.

BACK FROM CHINA TO GRACE CHURCH

Forty-two years as a missionary in China is a record few ever attain, yet Rev. C. M. Dickie has returned from China after spending a lifetime of service in the interior, and will tell of his exciting experiences in Grace Presbyterian church, corner of Hanover and Evergreen, on Sunday night at 7: 45. All are welcome, and those attending will hear this missionary, who is able to speak better Chinese than any other language, tell his story in a rich Scottish dialect, for he is a Scotchman.

ANTI-HANGING BILL WILL HAVE HEARING ON MARCH 10

It is announced that the anti-capital punishment bill of Senator George Rochester, Los Angeles, has been set for public hearing before the senate committee on revision of criminal procedure on March 10. The Rochester bill differs from the Hornblower bill in providing that the death penalty be reserved for the murderer of "the president of the United States, the govenor or any warden, jailer, or legal custodian of a prison." It also contains a provision giving the jury the right to impose life sentence without parole.

The quota for the San Mateo County Chapter was $8,000.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

On last Saturday afternoon a very serious accident was narrowly averted on Mission street in front of the high school. A little tot named Mary Miller, who lives in Colma, ran out from behind a bus and across the street in front of a passing automobile driven by D. S. Chiappari, 35 Foote avenue, San Francisco. The driver had to swerve his car across the high school lawn in order to escape hitting the child. He hit one of the high school electric lamp posts, demolishing the lamp post and wrecking his car. Bill's Garage was telephoned for to take charge of the wreck.

At the meeting of the high school board of trustees on last Tuesday evening, Mr. Vireno was appointed the authorized representative of the board to a conference between the boards of supervisors of San Mateo county and San Francisco city and county regarding the widening of Mission street. He was requested to present the urgent need of having an underpass across Mission street in front of the high school building for the safe passing of the students from one side of the street to the other.

On Wednesday afternoon the student body listened in to a program of the National Education Association, meeting in Detroit, Michigan. Among the speakers were Richmond P. Hobson, of Spanish War fame, on the subject, "Fighting the Drug Enemies of Mankind," Coach Zuppke, of the University of Illinois, on "School Sports and Health," and James E. Rogers on "Lengthening the Life Span Through Education." Music was furnished by the Junior high school chorus of Detroit.

Mr. Ferguson called an assembly on Tuesday to warn the students against speeding on the way to and from school. He advised the students to keep within the speed limit as a matter of "safety first." He said that the speed laws are not made to annoy automobile owners or curtail their privileges. They are made as a matter of necessity and for the purpose of protecting both automobile drivers and pedestrians. He urged the students to learn by advice rather than wait for experience. Lessons learned by experience are very effective, he said, but they are very costly. "Tags" come high, and jail sentences still higher, he warned.

The Founders' day program, held by the P. T. A., was given February 19, and commenced with Mrs. Gehringher playing "The Star Spangled Banner." A discussion on student aid followed. The student aid department helps students who would not otherwise be able to attend school. The P. T. A. decided on a whist party to be held March 1 for the benefit of the student aid. The program was then started by Mr. Ferguson, who gave a talk on the P. T. A. and school affairs. He told about the various improvements having been made since he went to school and what has been accomplished especially in the books furnished to students today.

Mr. Cohen, who had charge of the entertainment, turned the program over to Mrs. Helen Doble, who is head

FOREIGN WAR VETS ORGANIZE POST IN DALY CITY

There was a splendid turnout at the City Hall last Monday night to organize "Old Glory Post" of Veterans of Foreign Wars, such notables attending as Comrades Leavitt, Past National Junior Vice-Commander; Comrade Masburg, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Department; Comrade William Flinn, Department Sergeant of Arms, and Comrade Stewart, Department Deputy Inspector.

There are now nineteen members listed on the charter, and among them appear Walter F. Dorn, Arthur Mangan, Harold C. Woodworth, Marcello J. Vernengo, Anthony Parmisano, Merle Nesby, H. G. McGlumphy, Edward K. Thomas, Albert Schumer, Wilson R. Bailey, Tim F. Crowley, Joseph E. Doyle, William Doyle, Joseph H. Cowley, William DeVanie.

Officers were elected as follows:

Post Commander, M. A. Nesby; Senior Vice-Commander, H. G. McGumphy; Junior Vice-Commander, W. F. Dorn; Chaplain, W. R. Bailey; Adjutant, Tim F. Cowley; Quartermaster, William DeVanie; Officer of Day, H. G. Woodworth; Instructor, A. Campbell; Surgeon, A. Mangan.

A number of the comrades are responsible for the enlistment of one or more members. Let's see if we all can put our heart and soul into this organization and bring in our share of recruits. It's a benefit to you, and we all know it's a beneift to them.

Just a word about the Ladies' Auxiliary, now in the forming. If the fine reception we had at Comrade Nesby's home Monday night is any criterion, we all look forward to some splendid evenings in the future.

The Post will soon have its charter and number, and plans are now under way for the renting of a permanent meeting hall. At a date soon to be named we will have our installation, and we are promised the support of a large number of other Posts, including a band. So, Comrades, we have gotten off to a wonderful start; the enthusiasm that brought the Post to Daly City is in every one of the officers, and will, if sustained by all, make "Old Glory Post" something to be proud of.

M. A. NESBY, Post Commander.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY

Robert Mullen and his daughter both celebrated their birthday on Valentine day, at a Valentine party given in their honor in their San Mateo home. The Mullen family formerly lived on San Diego avenue, Daly City. The assembled guest most thoroughly enjoyed the indoor games. The home was gaily decorated with streamers of Valentines, which were attached to the table and used as place cards. The honored guests recevied many lovely gifts. A most delicious supper was enjoyed by the following: Ruth Hesselein, Charles Hesselein, Billie Metz, Ernest Metz, Bennett Letherson, Louis Soule, May Wald, Thelma Jamison, Dean Nelson, Warren Bridewell, Myrtle Mullin, Ida Dickson, Robert Mullin.

FOUNDER'S DAY OBSERVED BY CROCKER P. T. A. MEMBERS

Founder's day and the second anniversary of the Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association were celebrated in the club rooms at 12 Wellington avenue, on the last regular meeting day. An interesting program had been arranged by the Founder's day chairman. A pageant, "The Oracle Speaks," was featured, the cast being made up of members of the Association, and the music being furnished by Orvilla D. Pauw. A piano solo was presented by Jane Frances Reiman.

Mrs. J. R. Spann, president of the Seventeenth District, was the speaker for the evening. After an interesting talk on the great work done by the P. T. A. since its founding, thirty-four years ago, she presented the Past President, Mrs. Ivy Alexander, with a Past President emblem.

A short business sesison was held, in which plans were laid for several interesting projects to be carried out in the near future, most important of which is a first aid class to be sponsored by Crocker P. T. A.

A budget was made for the year's philanthropic work, which included donations to the San Mateo Preventorium, Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and the Bureau for Handicapped Children.

After the business had been concluded, the meeting was adjourned to the tables, where the birthday cake was lighted and the delicious home-made cakes and salads were served. All those present voted it a most delightful evening and wished Crocker P. T. A. success in the future.

HIGH CLASS HORSES TO TAKE PART IN TANFORAN RACES

High class runners will be shipped to Tanforan in the next few weeks from Pleasanton, Walnut Creek, Victoria, and other places where they have been resting in the winter months. Recently the various trainers, anticipating the opening of Tanforan on Tuesday, March 31, began to send their gallopers along in earnest. The conditioners do not intend to be caught napping, but plan to have their horses perfectly fit, so they can run against the good ones that are coming from Agua Caliente.

Nearly two hundred horses are in training at Pleasanton. The course over at The Horse Haven of the West has been kept in tip top shape all through the off season here, and the trainers have had plenty of opportunity to try out their thoroughbreds.

Miss Marion Hollins, Peter B. Kyne, Charles A. Hartwell, Major Sven Christenson, Dr. George A. Hodges, Leonard Hammond, John H. Rosseter, G. B. Towne, J. B. Grant, E. A. Pool, John McCullough and others have horses at Pleasanton and expect to have their colors up in the twenty-one day meeting at Tanforan. Miss Hollins has a two-year-old by Dazzler of which she thinks quite highly, in charge of the veteran G. B. Noyes. It may be that this youngster will get to the post on one of the days on which Nevada Queen, also owned by Miss Hollins, is running.

Over at Heathern Farm, owned by John W. Marchbank, a number of promising horses are being conditioned on the home course. This string will be joined at Tanforan by that taken to Agua Caliente last fall by Trainer H. W. Hoag. De Swasey, Chazzan, Givanna and other highly regarded colts and fillies are in the Southern string.

From the north, E. J. Harris will send Princess Betty, Princess Sally and Boy of Mine to Tanforan. They have been in training for some time at Victoria under the direction of George Thomas, who will be remembered as having had Dusty Miller and other clever performers at Emeryville. Jack Craigmyle is coming along to do the riding for the stable. Princess Betty won the British Columbia Futurity at Vancouver last year. The fillies are by the Cyllene horse Marcus which has been standing up in Canada for several years.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS STAGE HOUSE-WARMING PARTY

It has been aptly said that "It takes a heap o' livin' to make a house—a home," and the houses occupied by Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Landini have always meant "Open House," and the welcome only limited to the capacity of the dwelling.

The doors of their newly remodeled home at 408 Winchester street were opened on Tuesday night and it was fitting that the Royal Neighbors be among the first to be welcomed by these hospitably generous people in their "Bigger and Better" home, which is pronounced by the guests of Tuesday evening as "the last word" in comfort.

The spacious rooms, which will lend themselves to any form of decoration, were charming with heather and spring blossoms.

Whist was played after the grand parade of inspection, and refreshments were served a la cafetaria before a huge open fire in the basement banquet room especially constructed to cater to large gatherings.

The members of the organization present and the few invited guests felt the spirit of the "Other House by the Side of the Road" and expressed the wish for years of peace and memories of happy gatherings in their new home.

BELOVED WOMAN PASSES ON FOLLOWING HEART ATTACK

The many friends of Mrs. Johanna Carl, of Shakespeare street, will be shocked to hear of her sudden death on Sunday, February 22, death being due to heart failure. Mrs. Carl leaves besides a host of friends, her husband, George Carl, and a son, Richard Carl, of New Jersey, to mourn her passing. The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co. at 2:30 P. M. last Tuesday. The services were conducted by Edelmuth Lodge No. 13, O. H. F. S. Interment was in Mount Olivet Memorial Park.

A culprit described as a "co-wrecker" of a bank got ten years. Which seems to have been a co-wrecked verdict.

Archaeologists might gather a fine collection of fossils around Washington without ever sinking a spade.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

of the entertainment department of the Market Street Railway Company. All the entertainers were from Division 28. Mr. Valdimar Rossouchin, a Russian pianist, delighted the audience with Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Major." As an encore he played "A Night in Spain," one of his own compositions. Mr. James Fuller, a conductor on the line, sang "The Sunshine of Your Smile," with Mr. Rossouchin accompanying. His second number was "In the Old Country Down." Both songs were well received.

The next on the program was Mr. Peacock with his dog Elmo. The dog was very clever, doing and obeying Mr. Peacock's every signal. He did many tricks, the best of all being a game of catch, Mr. Peacock being the pitcher and Elmo the catcher. Elmo called signals for the kind of a ball he wanted and Mr. Peacock would answer "Yes" or "No" with signals which Elmo seemed to understand.

Mr. Le Beau gave an exhibition of the "Vanishing American from McAllister street," by swinging from one to six ropes at a time, the ropes being attached to a Yeddish derby on his head.

Speakers during the entertainment were Mr. Prescott, Mrs. Hughes, the president of the Peshing P. T. A., Mr. Saiz, teacher of dramatics, history, economics and civics, Mr. Quirmback, physical geography, and commercial arithmetic teacher, Mr. Gehringer of the school board, and Mrs. Brown, another member of the school board. Mr. Ferguson was toastmaster. The tables were decorated attractively.

On February 20, at 11:15, Jefferson high held an assembly in honor of "The Father of His Country," George Washington. The occasion was the celebration of his birthday, and a holiday was declared for Monday. The entire student body joined in singing patriotic songs. Gertrude Allen read an essay on Washington which she had prepared for her Civics assignment. Lola Hooton, also of the Civics class, read an excellent essay which she had prepared, also on Washington. Mr. Ferguson gave a talk about Washington, bringing out his importance as a general, as well as his genius in statesmanship. The program closed with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

"A COMMUNION SERMON" AT CAVARLY BAPTIST CHAPEL

The following will be the services at Calvary Baptist Chapel, 5724 Mission street, next Sunday:

Sunday school at 9:45. Classes for all ages.

Morning service at 11 o'clock. The sermon will be by the pastor, Rev. Charles Woessner. The message will be "A Communion Sermon."

The Young People's meeting will convene at the regular 7 o'clock hour.

At the 8 o'clock service the Chapel will have as its guest speaker Prof. Earle Garfield Linsley, M. S., B. D., Prof. Linsley is lecturer in Geography of Bible Lands at the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School, and Professor of Astronomy at Mills College, Oakland. He will give his illustrated sermon titled, "God's Glories in the Skies," or as it has been termed at other times, "Seeing Things at Night." This is Professor Linsley's popular lecture on the stars. The general public is invited to these services.

Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the regular prayer meeting hour, we will study Third John. These studies have proven themselves very fascinating and informing. Mililons today are without any spiritual evidence in their lives. This is not always due to a lack of belief in a Divine—in God; but it is largely due to ignorance which has been classified among the great sins of mankind. Toadstools and mushrooms look alike to an untrained mind; but the eating of them will prove their difference. One means almost immediate death, while the other a substantial food and continued life. To some all religions, cults and sects seem alike. This is largely due to ignorance. Death and eternity will reveal their realness. Jesus said: "I came that you may have life and that you might have it more abaundantly." Third John carries within it the key to this life. Give God just one hour of your time; come with an open heart and mind; be square with yourself and with God. Only then will you be able to say: "I do not only believe Thy word, but I feel Thy presence within my heart." True are the words of the poet who wrote: "No man can long truthfully say that I believe, without soon being able to exclaim 'I have felt Thy presence in my heart.'"

"Min and Bill" Coming To Daly City Theatre

"Min and Bill," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's adaptation of Lorna Moon's penetrating novel, "Dark Star," with Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery in the featured role, will be the attraction at the Daly City Theatre next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 4, 5 and 6.

The story, a dramatic tale of the conflict between foster-mother and natural mother for the control of a child, laid amid the sordid surroundings of a fishing village, was one of the "best sellers" of the season, and in its film form is hailed as one of the most powerful talking picture dramas of today.

Miss Dressler, as the keeper of a disreputable water-front dive, is seen in her first character role since "Anna Christie," and Beery, as the fishing-barge captain, likewise plays his first straight role since his recent successful portrayal in "The Big House."

The story was adapted to the screen by Frances Marion and Marion Jackson, and was directed by George Hill, producer of "The Big House." The supporting cast includes Dorothy Jordan, who has been seen opposite Ramon Novarro in "Call of the Flesh" and other productions; Marjorie Rambeau, the well-known stage actress; Donald Dillaway, Broadway juvenile; DeWitt Jennings, Russel Hopton, Frank McGlynn and Gretta Gould.

Outstanding sequences of the picture include the crafty scheming by which Miss Dressler as the hotel proprietress attempts to prevent the truant officer from taking her ward out of her home; the droll domestic quarrels between Miss Dressler and Beery as her ship-captain "friend;" the pathetic parting scene in which Miss Dressler hides her misery at losing her ward by a pretense of indifference because she wants the girl to gain a finer environment; and the tragic and powerful climax in which the water-front crony resorts to murder as the only way out of a hopeless situation.

The sordid background of the production echoes the grimmer aspects of the story. Actual operations of the cannery workers, scenes aboard famous whaling vessels and an unusual setting built on a rocky breakwater in the Pacific Ocean add further interest to the production.

BOY NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Last Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, on Mission street at Wilson, Jack Martin, aged 8, of 59 Liebig street, ran from behind a parked automobile into the rear fender of a Ford roadster being driven north on Mission street by Mario Milano, of 51 Whittier street. The injured lad was taken, still unconscious, to the South San Francisco hospital by Officer E. Heim and Mrs. L. Pepper After being examined by a physician there, his mother asked that he brought home, and he was put under the care of the family physician.

CELEBRATES EIGHTH BIRTHDAY

THIS IN ONE TIME WHEN AUTOISTS GET A BREAK

A gasoline war is on in the Peninsula district, and as the result the autoist believes that at last he is getting a break.

Major oil companies, peeved at the appearance in the Bay region of what they term "bootleg gas," last Wednesday opened the 1931 gasoline war by dropping prices two cents a gallon. Retail prices all over the Peninsula on Wednesday went from 21 to 19 cents. Similar reductions were reported from San Francisco and the East Bay.

Prices to the "reseller," in other words to the service station men, went from seventeen to fifteen cents. The new nineteen cent price was in effect at Standard, Shell, General Associated and Union stations. Confirmation of the outbreak of the new war came from San Francisco when the Standard Oil Company offices issued a statement saying that the reduction was put into effect for the purpose of meeting "competition of cut-price gasoline" and would not likely extend beyond California.

The new "bootleg" gasoline against which the war is directed made its appearance in San Mateo fully two months ago. It has been selling at seventeen cents a gallon. Wednesday's reduction, it is pointed out, cuts in half the margin between the major companies' product and the so-called "bootleg." The former expect to be able to compete with the seventeen-cent price without difficulty despite the two-cent difference.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

Now is a good time to start a real war on semi-wild domestic cats that slink unmolested in our fields and game ranges. These animals are multiplying fast in some districts, and unless co-operative action is taken a real menace is in the offing, according to reports made to the Division of Fish and Game.

Cats prove to be a severe hindrance to the farmer because they prey upon the birds that help destroy insect pests. In a granary where mice are apt to cause considerable damage the cat has a place, but when allowed to wander into the fields and brush the feline quickly deserts his domestic duties for the more exciting pleasure of catching birds.

By catching mother quail, who is extremely loyal to her nest eggs, the cat virtually destroys a whole covey of birds at one stroke of the paw. It is estimated that thousands of quail are destroyed every year in this manner. Quail nesting will not start until late in the spring or early in the summer, and now would be a good time to rout the cat population without disturbing the nesting birds.

Sportsmen can be of great service to the quail in the matter of planting feed during the spring months of the year. Seeds planted now in the proper places will go a long way in solving difficult problems at a later date in the season.

Instead of being a laborious task, the planting can be made the part of a pleasure hike during a week end. All that is necessary is to put several hands-full of seed in the pocket of the walking jacket for dissemination in the quail lands.

With the quail sanctuary system developed to such a fine standard, there are now more than 600 such quail refuges in the state, it should not be hard to find a suitable ground for the planting. Not only that, but the planter stands and excellent chance of gathering some very valuable first-hand information on the habits of the birds.

The main fishing season does not open until May, and the hunting season until August, so there is plenty of time to perform this important duty.

WASHINGTON VOLUMES SOON READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

President Hoover has written the foreword to the first volume of the "Writings of George Washington," the memorial edition which was authorized by a specific act of Congress to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

The first volume has been completed and will be ready for distribution in a few weeks, according to the division of information and publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

President Hoover, who is chairman of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, says in his foreword that "until recently no readable biography of George Washington in reasonable compas made him stand for what he was—the most potent human and intellectual force in a firmament of American intellect."

This is the first volume of the memorial edition which will be of some twenty-five volumes. The work is being edited by Dr. John C. Fitzpatrick for the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

The Commission, according to President Hoover's statement, has set out to publish a definitive edition of all the written and printed words of George Washington in the form in which they left his hands, including several volumes of general orders, almost the whole of which up to now had remained in manuscript only. Most of his original writings of every kind are fortunately preserved in the Library of Congress.

DEER HUNTERS SENT TO JAIL BY REDWOOD CITY JUDGE

Three Redwood City men who had confessed to shooting deer on the Spring Valley Lakes game preserve were given a ten-day jail sentence when they appeared before Judge Percy Jackson last Friday.

Because they are married and have families, R. J. Shane and Richard Ludlow will be allowed to serve their sentences on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, but Morrey Coleman, single, will serve a staight ten-day term. The two married men, in pleading guilty, told Judge Jackson that they killed the deer to help support their families.

The phrase about "government of the people, by the people, for the people," was probably only another of Lincoln's little jokes.

SPEED

There is an average of one automobile for every family in the United States. Think of it! Over twenty-four odd million of them!

From a mere new-fangled idea they progressed to a luxury class, and from luxury to necessity. In some sections of the country the local average is two automobiles to every family, and the market unquestionably is increasing all the time.

We are moving faster and faster all the time—10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, 100 miles an hour. But in pleasure, utility and service, and increased earning power,the automobile is more than paying for itself. They have changed our entire mode of living, and the entire economic structure of the country. The change has been for the better.

We are living faster, but we're enjoying ourselves more, and we've certainly got to hand it to the durn things. "We've got to admit that "four wheels and a motor" have certainly added zest to life and living in Daly City.

THE STORY

Hiram Butterworth, miser, decides to leave his fortune to Elmer Clarke, a poor young nephew. He tells Absolom McPeake, his lawyer, of a deal forty years ago in which he swindled a man out of $40,000, and arranges for payment with interest. Butterworth dies suddenly. Through a gossiping telegraph operator the town of Pilarcitos hears of Elmer's fortune before he does.

"Well, Elmer?" she queried.

"Well, Nellie?" he echoed.

"You're keeping something from me, Elmer."

"If I am, Nellie, I don't know what it is. Do you?"

"Well, I've heard, Elmer, that Uncle Hiram Butterworth has left you a million dollars."

"Interesting if true, Nellie. The stories that are circulated in this town and gain credence are unbelievable. However, Nellie, I have got some news for you, and you can believe this. That human icicle Ansel Moody stopped me on the street half an hour ago and told me he'd accept my application for five thousand and give me an open credit for twenty-five hundred more. I'm going up at noon to close my lease on H. Wasservogel's old butcher shop."

Nellie came closer to Elmer and took each lapel in her little brown hands. "Elmer," she warned, "beware the Greeks when they come bringing gifts. Do not accept that loan and do not treat for that lease today. Please!"

"Why?"

"I don't think you ought to. Today is not the day for you to discuss anything with anybody—even with me."

"Have you been going in for astrology, Nellie?"

"No, but the little birds tell me things."

"I had an impression that in Pilarcitos that was the prerogative of old hens," he replied. "Very well Nellie, I'll not do anything, then, without consulting my manager."

She drenched him with her smile and continued on to her work. She was paying teller for the Pilarcitos Commercial Trust & Savings bank and one of old Ansel's dummy directors.

Nellie also was the trust officer of the bank and a notary public. Like Elmer Clarke, she was an orphan. She was twenty-two years old and while already in Pilarcitos she was regarded as an old maid, more or less in the sere and yellow leaf, she was still the recipient of much attention from the most presentable of the Pilarcitos swains and was reputed to have declined to marry each of them.

Elmer Clarke, the last of a stricken field, was holding his own with Nellie, however. Two years had passed since first he had sat with her on the veranda of the Tully house, where Nellie made her home with old Mr. and Mrs. Tully.

Before Elmer could escape inside the Smoke Shoppe, he felt a hand plucking at his sleeve. The messenger had arrived with the telegram from Absolom McPeake. Elmer signed for it, read it, tucked it in his pocket and returned to the Smoke Shoppe. Sam Haskins waited for him to say something—waited five minutes, in fact, and then said:

"No bad news, I hope, Elmer."

Elmer shook his head and went on wiping dust off the stock. Presently Sam Haskins essayed another sortie.

"Elmer, they tell me you've fallen heir."

"I have," Elmer answered without enthusiasm.

Sam swatted him smartly between the shoulder blades again. "Well, why don't you say something, Elmer?"

"Nothing to say, Sam. The whole town knows it already. You couldn't expect Old Lady Bray to live with that news bottled up inside her, could you?"

"Reckon she'd bust if she tried it, Elmer." Sam heaved a heavy sigh. "I suppose this means it's up to me to git myself some new help," he added.

Now that Sam had opened the ticklish subject Elmer was quick to take advantage of the opening. "Yes, Sam. I don't suppose either of us can afford the luxury of a million-dollar man working for forty dollars a week. However, Sam, I was going to leave you, anyhow. In fact, it was my intention to slip you the bad news tonight. This telegram hasn't made the slightest bit of difference, because the news it contains is as great a surprise to me as it was to Old Lady Bray. I was going to quit you to go into business for myself."

"In what line?" Sam's tone was freighted with anxiety.

"Same line as this."

"What? After workin' for me five years an' learnin' the business from me, you figure on startin' opposition?" Sam Haskins lost his temper completely. "It's a rotten trick to play on me, Elmer."

"I'm sorry you think so. At any rate, your protest does not move me, so you have my resignation, to take effect immediately. I wouldn't work a split second for a man who thinks I'm capable of dirty tricks and who has as little appreciation of loyalty and ability as you possess." And Elmer tossed the cheesecloth under the counter, took his salary to date from the cash register, made out a receipt for it—and walked out of the Smoke Shoppe.

"You goin' to let me down without notice?" Sam cried incredulously.

"I wasn't—until you talked that way. Hereafter, Sam, get along the best way you know how."

He walked away down Main street, only to be stopped by a concerted rush of men congregated across the street. They pumped his hand, slapped his back and showered him with congratulations.

Eventually Elmer escaped from them and continued on down to the Pilarcitos Commercial Trust & Savings bank. At Nellie's window he paused long enough to hand her the telegram from McPeake and continued on to Ansel Moody's office.

The banker rose expeditiously and shook hands with him. "Well, Elmer, did you bring the search of the title of your C street pruppty with you?" he inquired with mock interest.

Elmer sat down. "I've decided not to go into that business after all, Mr. Moody," he announced. "Since speaking with you this morning I have received a telegram from a lawyer in Muscatine, Iowa, informing me that under the last will and testament of my Uncle Hiram Butterworth, of that city, I am, with the exception of two minor bequests, the sole beneficiary of an estate conservatively estimated at a million dollars."

"It's a Rotten Trick to Play on Me, Elmer."

Of all the congratulatory handshakes he had received that morning none equaled in promptness and intensity of grip the one which old Ansel Moody gave him now. "By gravy!" cried the banker. "By gravy! If this ain't the best news I've ever heard, Elmer. You're the richest man in Pilarcitos an' the second richest man in the county. I congratulate you with all my heart."

"Thank you, Mr. Moody. I must say I do not feel depressed about it myself. The first thought about it to me after receiving that telegram was that I had been going sixteen hours a day for five years without a vacation; and during that five years I have had to beat back a long way to regain my health. I was struggling for a prize—and now the necessity for further struggle is ended. I have come to the conclusion, therefore, that I'll leave Sam Haskins in possession of his monopoly."

At that moment Nellie entered to return the telegram to him. "I'm awfully happy for your sake, Elmer," she told him. "Still, this is not a surprise to me. I told you last night that within a week your ship would come in."

"Thank you, Nellie. I came down to tell you first, but of course you knew it already. Old Lady Bray had broadcast it."

"Yes, she telephoned me first, Elmer."

Ansel Moody turned to his paying teller and trust officer. "Why didn't you telephone me this great news, Miss Cathcart?" he demanded.

"I would have informed you when I reached the bank this morning, Mr. Moody, if Alice Goodfellow hadn't told me she had telephoned you at your home."

Old Ansel could have stabbed her with his paper knife. To cover his confusion he picked up the telegram and studied it carefully.

"Sure somebody ain't tryin' to play a practical joke on you, Elmer?" he asked finally. "If you want, I'll wire some bank in Muscatine an' ask them to investigate an' report."

"If you will be kind enough to do that, Mr. Moody, I will be under obligation to you."

"Certainly. Miss Cathcart, attend to that matter, please. Elmer, if this bank can serve you in any way, always remember that that's what we're here for—to serve our customers. Good luck to you, boy, an' God bless you!"

He shook hands with Elmer again, very cordially, and answered the telephone. Elmer followed Nellie out into the lobby of the bank.

"Don't be misled by Mr. Moody's friendliness, Elmer," she warned him. "He's after your account. If he hadn't had advance information he would not have waylaid you this morning and offered to finance you."

"Think so?" Elmer was a trifle doubtful.

"Know so. The man's a shark. Be careful of him. He'll try to get your confidence and unload some of his own cats and dogs on you under the guise of advising you in your investments. In fact, you'll have a great number of people sacrificing themselves to the solemn duty of safeguarding that million dollars, Elmer. Heretofore you had a host of friends who loved you for what you are. You will now double the number of your friends. Be careful of them, Elmer. They will love you for what you have. That, by the way," she added, "is the first, last and only advice I am going to give you and I prefer to give it to you before you come into your inheritance. I loathe competition."

Elmer was about to say something that had been close to his heart for two years, but reflected in time that the lobby of a bank was not the proper place to say it. Moreover, Mr. Crittenden, the cashier, had come out of his office now and was proffering a congratulatory handshake.

"You'll find that wealth is a burden," he informed the new millionaire sagely. "Put it in bonds, Elmer—Liberty bonds. The interest yield is small, but it is safe."

Elmer caught the small smile in back of Nellie's lovely eyes as he left the bank. On the sidewalk he met Ed Wyatt, mayor of the town, who promptly corraled him.

"Conserve it, Elmer, conserve it," his Honor boomed in his mellow, rotund volce that hadn't any more sincerity in it than near beer. "When you get around to it, see me and I'll put you next to one of the grandest buys in an apricot orchard that is to be found in the state."

Elmer thanked him and proceeded on his way. But not very far. Lafe Kidwell, the chief of police, called him over to his car and, leaning out, gave him his card, after first writing on it: "To all peace officers:

"The bearer, Elmer B. Clarke, is a personal friend of mine. Any courtesies extended will be appreciated."

"You'll be getting yourself a new car, Elmer," the chief prophesied, "and this card might help you with the traffic officers."

Elmer tucked the card away in his wallet, a little pleased to have it in case of emergency. Arriving home, he changed into an old suit and gum boots, climbed into his second-hand flivver and departed for his favorite trout stream.

It was dark when he returned to Pilarcitos. He changed his clothes and drove around to the Tully house. He found Nellie seated on the front porch.

"Have you had your dinner, Elmer?" she asked.

"No, Nellie. Thought I'd come around and take you to dinner out to Joe Angellotti's. Been fishing. Didn't have much luck, but got enough for you and me. Joe will cook them for us."

She climbed into the coupe and took the wheel, "I'll drive, Elmer. Something tells me you have had a hard day."

"I have, Nellie. I've been experiencing the burden of wealth. Already old enemies show a disposition to let sleeping dogs lie and the Elmer B. Clarke Benevolent and Protective association is in process of organization exactly as you foretold."

"What are you going to do, Elmer?"

"I'm going to Muscatine as soon as I can, have a consultation with McPeake, learn what the estate consists of and then decide what I am going to do. While I'm away you can use the flivver."

"Thanks, Elmer. Want me to feed your dog and the canaries?"

He turned toward her impulsively and laid his hand over hers, where it clasped the wheel. "You're a sweetheart, Nellie," he murmured.

Nellie looked at him with love lights in her eyes, but suddenly remembering that he was now a millionaire and she must not be guilty tonight of a tendency toward a sentiment she would not have bothered to repress if Elmer had been as poor as Job's famed turkey, she withdrew her hand from under his and asked him how many trout he had caught that day.

"Ten nice ones, Nellie. Somehow I couldn't keep my mind on the fish today. It's quite a shock to become a millionaire without warning."

"You'll grow accustomed to it. By the time the novelty of buying whatever you want has worn off, you'll have learned much of men and motives. Probably, too, you'll have learned much about women. And of course you'll not live in Pilarcitos."

"Really, Nellie, you wouldn't blame me for leaving this little country town of three thousand inhabitants. I've been weary of it for a long, long time."

"You've had the wanderlust ever since you went away to the war," Nellie complained. "However, I suppose you'll come back occasionally to visit your real friends in Pilarcitos."

"Of course, Nellie. By the way, did Moody receive an answer from the Muscatine bank?"

"Not up to the time I left the office."

"I'm not going to make any definite plans until that telegram comes, Nellie. Suppose McPeake's telegram has been garbled in transit. Suppose some trick clause should develop in the will. Suppose I have to do some fool thing before I'll be eligible as a residuary legatee; suppose I decide not to do it and the million dollars goes to charity."

"Better play safe, Elmer. Tackle Ansel Moody for a large unsecured loan tomorrow morning. If the bank confirms the McPeake telegram, he'll fall all over himself to accommodate you. Then if your inheritance proves a dissappointment you'll not be at Moody's mercy."

Elmer laughed. "I'll do it," he declared. "It'll be nice to know I have a ten thousand dollar credit."

"Make it twenty thousand and see if you can get away with it."

"It would be nice to have the money in case a cog slipped in that will," he agreed. "Well, I'll try old Ansel out in the morning."

He and Nellie had dinner at Joe Angellotti's Italian tavern ten miles out on the country turnpike. They danced until midnight to jazz strains from a radio with a loud speaker and drove home very happy in the second-hand coupe.

At parting that night Elmer Clarke kissed Nellie Cathcart for the first time since he had known her—and he had known her since his twelfth year. Nellie offered no serious objection. However, with maidenly repression, she did not invite a shower of osculation, and when Elmer seemed about to unload the secret he had reserved for unloading until he could afford to offer Nellie worldly comforts far in excess of those she at present enjoyed, she reminded him that he was not to make any plans until the morrow.

Old Testament Writers Not Botanically Exact

Perhaps it is not to be wondered at that the Old Testament writers writing in, or at least of, a remote antiquity, should not be extremely exact in their botanical or other natural history nomenclature.

In early days men were not very particular about the naming of the trees of the field. There seems to have been a tendency then, as now, to place all trees in two classes, those that shed their leaves each autumn and those which do not. Just as we roughly speak of the first class as hardwood and the conifers with their perennial foilage as soft wood. Under the generic term fir, or it may be gopher wood, they classed the cedar, the fir, the cypress, the pine and the hemlock, while the wood oak covered a variety, possibly most of the trees of the hardwood or deciduous kind.

The sacred writers, we must always remember, were not concerned about imparting scientific knowledge or names. Their one great aim was to display the progress of God's revelation to his people and their attitude towards him, and his revelation.—Montreal Herald.

"Ain't Dat Sumpin'!"

The colored parson had invited a stranger to address the congregation, and wishing to say something wonderful in his introductory remarks, said, "Bredern and sistern, the gentleman who am to speak to you dis mo'nin' am de Soundin' Brass and de Tinklin' Cymbal of de No'thern Methodist Church. —Exchange.

Valley of Aare

If one would see nature in a bewitching mood he should visit the valley of Aare. The River Aare had such an enormous hold on the imagination of Wyss he was inspired to write: "Sometimes the Aare seems to me a young river god—rushing impetuously from its cavern and traversing the plains with gay speed, escorted by its troop of noisy brothers. Before long, caught in cupid's bonds, he joins hands with some naiad and lazily stretches himself in the lakes of Brienz and Thun, as if he wanted to taste the joys of calm repose." Coxe also remarked about this part of Switzerland over a century ago: "It is impossible to describe all these majestic and astonishing scenes, for indeed they defy the strongest powers of pen and pencil."

Drawbacks to Thought

Men seldom think deeply on subjects on which they have no choice of opinion; they are fearful of encountering obstacles to their faith. Sheridan.

After nearly a month's search, deputy sheriffs of Humboldt county recaptured Manuel Foresti, self-styled bad man who escaped from Eureka police officers on January 18, while waiting trial. He was hiding in a cabin in the Mattole Valley, fifty-five miles southwest of Eureka.

As far as fire reduction was concerned, the year 1930 proved the best in Sequoia National Forest since 1913, according to Frank P. Cuuingham, forest supervisor. In 1930 there were nineteen fires and $259 damage, compared to fifty-two fires in 1929 and $17,295 damages.

More than fifty highway patrolmen and their immediate superiors from a half dozen counties were inspected at Martinez recently by Superintendent E. Raymond Cato of the California Highway Patrol. It was the first trip to be made into this territory by Cato, former Los Angeles police captain and successor to Eugene Biscaliuz.

Detailed plans were announced recently for the beginning of construction of a sixteen story $1,000,000 hotel at Stockton. The new edifice will be located at the head of McLeods Lake, at the corner of North El Dorado and Oak streets. It is backed by San Francisco and Stockton capitalists, and will be the largest hotel in interior California.

Control of the deluge of traffic which will swamp California highways from all parts of the world during the 1932 Olympic Games was being given early study by Captain E. Raymond Cato, superintendent of the stat highway patrol. In this connection, Captain Cato advocated doubling the present staff of more than 312 highway patrolmen.

Sonoma county real estate valued at $50,000 exchanged hands in a trade in which the Cnopius Mercantile Company acquired a concrete business building at Fifth and Riley streets, Santa Rosa, formerly owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Burbank, widow of the late Luther Burbank. Mrs. Burbank received a twenty-acre prune and pear orchard, formerly owned by the Cnopius company.

As part of the observance of anniversary week, Boy Scout troops Nos. 20 and 21 of Exeter did the city a "good turn" by cleaning vacant lots of tin cans and alleys of nails, bolts, etc., which might easily puncture a tire. Nearly every Scout in Exeter participated in the clean-up, each carrying a sack in which to place rubbish. Contents of the sacks were placed in piles along alleys and will be carried away by the city scavengers.

C. C. Teague, millioaire California agriculturist, will retire from the federal farm board next June and return to his business interests at Santa Paula, Ventura county, according to information received at the state capital. Teague is president of the California Walnut Growers' Association and the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, citrus co-operative marketing organization.

Thirty-one years after he and a fellow private in the Spanish-American war killed eighteen and wounded seventeen of a party of eighty-four insurrectionists, John E. Boyington, Roseville, is going to get a distinguished service medal. Boyington has been so notified by the War Department at Washington. He said the action took place October 15, 1900, near Tubungan, Philippine Islands, when he and two companions of Company I, 26th California Volunteer Infantry, walked into an ambush. Boyington and one of his companions escaped.

When parents sign for applications for motor vehicle licenses for minors, they become liable for any accidents, it was ruled by the Third District Appellate Court. This point was decided in a San Joaquin County damage case.

As the result of investigations made by State Department of Education fifteen children in the "Brother Isaiah" religious colony near Oroville started to school for the first time in several months. A one room schoolhouse has been erected on the colony grounds.

A direct boat service between San Francisco and the mouth of the Russian river has been proposed by B. G. Sears to the Railroad Commission.

The state division of highways has awarded a contract for $496,246 to H. W. Rohl, Los Angeles, for grading and surfacing 29.3 miles of the Barstow-Needles lateral in San Bernardino county. With exception of two miles, this project will complete improvement of the road between San Bernardino and Needles.

Among the names of prisoners on the February parole calendar, issued recently, appear W. W. Watterson and M. Q. Watterson, former Inyo county bankers. The brothers were convicted of embezzlements from Owens valley banks totaling $460,000. Their sentence was fixed at ten years. They entered the prison November 15, 1927. The name of Willie Fisher, who set the fire that destroyed the Hotel San Rafael, is on the list.

The Fresno city police court, abolished two years ago when Appellate Court decisions held the court to be illegal, will be re-established March 1 as a result of action taken by the board of supervisors. A recent act of the legislature and a new Appellate Court ruling upheld the validity of the court. Earle J. Church, former judge of the court and at present a city police judge, will preside.

California's State Division of Forestry will face the 1931 season of fire hazard with a fleet of 20 fire trucks, the largest motorized State fire-fighting unit in the United States. "Through a generous allotment for fire protection made by Governor Rolph in his biennial budget," said State Forester Pratt, "the State will be able to purchase four or five additional trucks to augment its present equipment this year."

Opening of the Ford motor assembling plant on Richmond inner harbor has been tentatively set for the middle of July by Clarence A. Bulwinkle, manager of the San Francisco plant. Completion of the building is scheduled for June 1. Bulwinkle estimated six weeks would be required to install machinery after the building is turned over to the Ford company. The plant will assemble 400 automobiles a day and employ 2500 men at capacity.

Dr. J. M. Toner, director of State Institutions, announced he had accepted the resignation of Dr. R. L. Ritchey, superintendent of the Mendocino State Hospital at Talmadge. The resignation is effective March 1. Dr. Toner announced he had appointed Dr. John C. Crowley, former State Senator from San Francisco and at present bacteriologist for the San Francisco Health Department.

Convicted of murder and later pardoned by the Governor, Harvey Lesher, Phil Rohan and Milke Garvey appeared before the State Board of Control, seeking compensation for the two and one-half years they spent in jail and San Quentin penitentiary. The case is the first to be brought under a statute enacted in 1913 which provides that compensation may be claimed for time served for a crime of which the prisoner was innocent.

A caload of California fruits will be sent from Dinuba to the needy in the Middle West. Several local business men conceived the idea, which is being heartily supported on all sides. Sponsored by the Dinuba Chamber of Commerce, the churches, service clubs, American Legion, American Legion Auxiliary, the Grange and all fraternal societies are expected to co-operate. No charge will be made for collecting, packing and shipping of the consignments.

Distribution of all handbills and circulars in Palo Alto was held illegal by Police Judge John E. Springer, in a literal interpretation of the city ordinance. The ruling is counter to the opinion previously given by City Attorney Norman E. Malcolm that their distribution was lawful provided the bills were securely fastened to a door knob or placed behind a screen door. Complaints have been numerous against the persistence of house-to-house distributors of circulars.

With an increase of sixty-one pupils since the opening of school last fall, the enrollmentof the Antioch-Live Oak School District has reached 1163, according to the announcement of Roger S. Phelps, district superintendent. The present enrollment is the highest in school history, says Phelps, and is an indication of the steady growth of the school. The total includes the Antioch High School, with an enrollment of 232, the grammar school with an enrollment of 508, and the primary school which registers 423 pupils. Crowded conditions exist at present in the primary building, but the completion of the new high school building and the adoption of the junior high school system are expected to relieve conditions.

Two possible sites for a landing field at Alturas are now under consideration by a committee of local business men who have been authorized to proceed with plans for an airport.

By a two to one vote, the citizens of San Rafael rejected a proposed new charter for this city, submitted by a Board of Freeholders. One of the principal objections to the new charter was the provision that would make the city clerk, treasurer, attorney, police judge and chief of police appointees of the city council.

A $28,500 SIGNATURE

Many a man's signature is worth much more than $28,500 when attached to a check or other commercial paper, but a mere autograph of no intrinsic value brought that amount at an auction in New York City.

It was the signature of Button Gwinnett, whose chief claim to fame rests upon the fact that he signed the Declaration of Independence as a rather obscure delegate from Georgia to the Continental Congress. The reason for the high value placed on his autograph is that it is the only one known to be in existence, except that on the Declaration itself.

Not a great deal is known of Gwinnett, except that he was a rather aggressive politician, who was defeated for the governorship of Georgia, failed to secure the post of brigadier-general of Georgia troops, and was killed in a duel in the year 1777, less than eleven months after he had signed the Declaration of Independence. He was killed by his successful rival for the leadership of the Georgia forces, General Lachlan McIntosh, who had denounced Button as a scoundrel in a public convention.

According to a contemporary writer, Gwinnett challenged the General to "give satisfaction for it as a gentleman before sunrise next morning in James Wright's pasture." The General sent word that "the hour was earlier than his usual, but would assuredly meet him with a pair of pistols only." The narrator continues: "Early next morning (May 5, 1777) . . . after politely saluting each other . . . immediately each took his stand and agreed to fire as they could; both pistols went off nearly at the same time, when Mr. Gwinnett fell."

We read that an opera singer threatened with flu recently sang her role "encased in mustard plasters." It is hoped that both performance and plasters as well.

We wouldn't mind giving another driver half the road if he would only take it on his side.

The fellow who said "it is hard to convict a million dollars" might have included major generals.

A PROBLEM OF THE AGES

Recently a pastor began his sermon with a statement which sounds quite familiar. He said:

"There is lawlessness everywhere. Children no longer obey their parents. It is evident that the end of things is at hand."

Then the preacher told his congregation that the words were not original with him, nor even an utterance of the present day, but that they had been translated from an inscription found among the ruins of ancient Assyria, dating centuries before the time of the patriarch Abraham.

Throughout all recorded history such pessimism regarding the future of the race has been expressed from time to time. Now and then an era of comparative peace and quiet has been experienced, only to be followed by recurring outbreaks of volence and lawlessness.

While present day conditions are bad enough, it seems that on the whole they are better than those of the past. There is more thought given to the relief of suffering, to the betterment of industrial conditions, to the protection of the helpless and to other humanitarian enterprises than ever before.

Although the World war gave civilization a severe test, recovery has been rapid and the ground lost is being speedily regained. It must be remembered that war has marked the history of every generation of mankind, and the same is true of lawlessness, oppression and every other manifestation of human imperfection.

It is reasonable to believe that these will always exist in greater or less degree, so long as good and evil struggle for mastery in the minds and hearts of men.

Dean Inge says that the only way to be really orthodox is not to think at all. Many find little difficulty in being orthodox.

Before old General Depression goes too far he might reflect on what happened to Napoleon.

Selling apples may help some, but it will hardly get to the core of the unemployment problem.

ALIEN REPRESENTATION

A proposed amendment to the Constiution, as provided in a resolution that was introduced in this session of Congress, whereby the representation of each state in the House of Representatives would be based upon the number of citizens in the state rather than the number of persons, is attracting an increasingly large amount of interest and bids fair to become an issue in this or succeeding sessions of the national legislative body in the near future.

Those in favor of this proposed amendment contend that the present method of apportionment gives an unfair advantage to the states within which there is centered a large number of aliens; and that aliens, though not allowed to vote by the laws of any state, might indirectly exert a balance of power on legislation of national import. It is further pointed out that large industrial centers, which naturally attracts the majority of immigrants, are given a large number of representatives in Congress and consequently a proportionally greater number of electoral votes in presidential elections. In answer to those who state as their objection the desire to adhere as nearly as possible to the plan adopted by the framers of the Constitution, it is said that the demarcation between citizens and aliens at the date was not clear, nor had the term citizen been clearly defined in this country. There was no recognized procedure in naturalization, and practically the only requirement was an oath of allegiance; that at that time a number of the states allowed all persons to vote regardless of whether or not they were naturalized.

The purpose and reasons for such an amendment to the Constitution appear fundamentally sound. To those who believe in a representative form of government, with each citizen equally represented in its legislative bodies, the idea back of the resolution proposing the amendment has a particular effective appeal. At least, the resolution deserves a chance, and not the fate of being pigeon-holed and forgotten. H.

HIGH COST OF ACCIDENTS

The ultimate cost of industrial accidents is estimated at four or five times the amount paid out in compensation, medical costs and insurance. The shifting of employes to unfamiliar work to replace injured workers can, for a time, almost disrupt even the best organized of industries, and particularly those in which labor is highly skilled.

Money spent for safety work produces high dividends, in the form of a more effective plant, happier workmen and lower operating costs. The old idea that safety precautions were only an expense has been outlawed in progressive industries. Efficiency and safety are synonomous.

Saftey work has two distinct phases —mechanical improvements for guarding machinery, and, of even greater importance, education. The industrial executive who educates his working force in safety methods and instills in them the "safety idea," performs a service not only to his employes, but to his stockholders.

Tremendous progress in the evolution of safety has been made in recent years, but much remains to be done, particularly in smaller industries. Accidents are still a glaring "debit" item in the record of industrial operations. Only constant vigilance and unremitting educational processes can bring industries to the highest possible standards of safety and efficiency.

HORRORS OF NEXT WAR

Speaking before a large audience in London recently, Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, warned that the next great war, if it ever should come, will involve the wholesale killing of civilian populations as well as military forces.

He declared that the war would be largely fought by aircraft using poison gases, from which none in the affected areas would escape. He also said that it has been found impossible to humanize warfare, for once it is started no power can control it, and the only way to stop such barbarities is to stop war itself.

Mr. Henderson's speech was in the nature of a plea for the mobilizing of public opinion throughout the world against war, in preparation for the forthcoming international disarmament conference to be held next year.

There is not the slightest doubt that a future war of large proportions would be attended by indescribable horrors. The engines of destruction which civilization has developed might conceivably be employed to destroy civilization itself, after the manner of Frankenstein's monster.

Whether the nations can produce statesmen able to prevent such a calamity is the most important question now facing the world.

India holds many secrets which might be valuable to the Western world. A good many women of the Occident would like to know how Gandhi reduced to 96 pounds.

Beautiful girls are more plentiful than intellectual ones, says a grouch, who adds that is in keeping with the demand.

OUR CHANGING BODIES

If you weigh yourself today, and then weigh yourself three weeks from now, your weight will probably show little change. But, according to Dr. Adolph of the University of Rochester, at least 93 per cent of the real substance of your body will have been changed in the meantime.

For, he asserts, the water content of a human body changes every twenty-one days, on an average, and the body is 93 per cent water. He also figures that the nitrogen of the body which is the chief chemical compostion of muscle, is renewed every 290 days, while the iron component is changed in a slightly longer period.

It used to be thought that the actual substance of one's body was completely changed about every seven years, but Dr. Adolph's researches indicate that the time of renewal is much less than that.

So, when you look in your mirror you may see what appears to be the same object you saw there a year or two before. But the real substance will be almost entirely different, and the change will generally be for the worse rather than for the better.

WATCH THE SEASONS

It would be wise for home and industry owners to inquire from responsible sources exactly what seasons of the year and weather conditions bring, in their localities, the greatest fire hazard.

A strong wind, a decided drop in humidity, a long dry spell—any may be nature's fire warning. Yet it is an unfortunate fact that most of us, in the matter of fire, make a habit of lockinfg the stable door long after the horse has been stolen.

There is no royal road to fire prevention, nor is there any mystery about it. It is simply a matter of common-sense, plus application of ordinary knowledge. Little reflection is necessary to show that to accumulate rubbish in corners, to neglect inspection of old wiring or flues, is to court disaster. That such reflection is rarely given the fire problem is shown by the fact that our annual waste reaches the tragic total of five hundred million dollars and ten thousand lives.

During 1930 fire losses were much greater than for several preceding years. The least we can do is to do our part, as individuals, to make 1931 as far as possible a "fireless year."

WHAT THE RAILROADS DO FOR THE NATION

The strong relation that exists between the railroad industry and general prosperity is shown by statistics covering operations in 1929.

In that year the lines paid about $1,086,802 in taxes each day—$755 a minute. Their bill for materials and supplies totaled $1,329,535,000.

Twenty-three per cent of the nation's output of bituminous coal; 19.2 per cent of fuel oil; 20 per cent of timber cut, and 17 per cent of iron and steel were purchased by the railroads.

About twenty million persons—one-sixth of the total population—are directly or indirectly dependent on the lines for their livelihood. There are one million railroad bondholders, and more than 800,000 stockholders. To this must be added the vast army of persons who own insurance policies, as insurance companies are large purchasers of railroad securities.

From the news pictures we observe that people who have become prominent had the foresight to have photographs taken early in life.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

That to advertise continuously is good business foresight.

Advertising is a necessity. No business can become a great success without its aid.

The whole world knows that well advertised products are of such quality that commend their favorable consideration.

Business concerns that are not continuous advertisers are overlooking the one big power that is so necessary to increase sales.

There is no sales opportunity that compares with advertising through the printed page.

Business concerns who think they can get sufficient business without inviting it are just "kidding" themselves. If they don't look out they will dream on until they are out of business.

Look cold facts in the face. Business is never so good that it can't be made better.

Business men who put in their time talking "poor business" usually have it.

Business men who continuously advertise quality goods get the big end of the business.

A pessimist is disagreeable, but he gives less foolish advice than an optimist.

Undaunted by the warning of his late distinguished father, Enrico Caruso, Jr., is studying for grand opera, under Adolfo de la Huerta, once provisional president of Mexico but now a singing teacher in Los Angeles. Young Caruso says his father one told him: "The cemeteries are full of tenors who tried to sing Otello." And that makes him all the more determined to sing it.

Prince, a police dog owned by Abe Goldstein, of Niagara Falls, is the latest animal hero. Playing with other dogs on shore ice which broke away and started to drift over the falls, Prince and all the others except one jumped into the water and easily swam ashore. The remaining dog would not leave the ice until Prince swam back to it and dragged the dumb animal into the water with his teeth. Both then swam to safety.

A 100-pound chunk of concrete falling fourteen stories can not be checked by a wave of the hand, but a 150-pound man on the sidewalk can. Seeing a pedestrian about to walk under such a falling body, Patrolman Palas, of New York City, motioned him back just in time to save his life. Fragments of the concrete spattered in every direction, but no one was hurt.

Again the unreliability of circumstantial evidence has been demonstrated. Suspicious officers arrested Henry Glover, of St. Paul, Va., who was carrying a leaky suitcase. An investigation disclosed that the dripping liquid was juice from a cracked jar containing sauerkraut.

As an incident of talk in behalf of the Red Cross at Austin, Texas, Will Rogers joked at the expense of notables, as usual. Of Chief Justice Hughes he said: "If he would only consent to run for President, come down here and travel with me from town to town, and let me shave him so people could see what he looks like, I could elect him."

Not only gilt-edged but gold-edged was the collateral put up by an aged negress of Thomasville, Ga., recently. Applying at the bank for a loan of $5, she was told that she must have an endorser or furnish other security. Returning to the bank later, she brought from her home a $10 gold piece, which the bank accepted for the desired $5 loan.

Temperance, not teetotalism, is the motto of Captain Boney Ridley, 89-year-old North Carolina mountaineer, according to a news dispatch which quotes him thus: "It is true that in my youth I would drink a bit, but for the last fifteen years I have been tapering down until now I notice that if I drink over a pint at once it has a tendency to go to my head."

AUTO IMPROVEMENTS CUT TRAFFIC DANGER

Safety features of present day automobiles have been improved to such an extent during the past decade that the reduction of traffic hazards has become almost entirely a question of good driving, according to a statement by the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association. Most accidents today are due to the failure on the part of the motorist to observe the rules for safe and proper driving, rather than any shortcomings in the mechanical features of equipment of the car, the statement declares.

The motorists' organization cites a recent review of safety developments in automobiles by Paul G. Hoffman, a member of the street traffic committee of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Hoffman, commenting on the progress being made in the building of safer vehicles, said:

"It is no longer possible to accuse the automobile of responsibility for more than a minor part of traffic accidents, and most of those are due to lack of maintenance. Today the weakest part of a moving machine is the driver. Most accidents happen because he fails to coordinate.

"This year witnesses the further use of safety, or non-shattering glass, in closed car construction; improved windshield wiper equipment; improved gear shifting; and better steering, to mention only a few of the added safety features.

"One of the most important changes came with the introduction of the four-wheel brake in 1921. In 1923 the balloon tire was introduced, adding to riding comfort and later to safety. In 1926 safety glass came into use. Many other changes have been made with a view to lessening fatigue and improving vision, such as more comfortable upholstery and the use of steel corner posts to eliminate blind spots.

"We still have with us the question of headlight glare, but progress is being made. Adjustment requirements now insisted on in many states are helping to reduce the number of accidents from this cause.

Burglars who broke into a store in Evanston, Ill., got three pennies from the cash register.

We read that few gunmen drink. The accuracy of their aim seems to confirm that statement.

NEW DRIVING REGULATION WOULD EMPHASIZE SAFETY

Heavier penalties for the driver who operates his car at a speed which is dangerous under the circumstances are provided by the new driving regulations which the Motor Vehicle Conference of California has proposed to the Legislature. Commenting on the plan, Percy E. Towne, chairman of the conference, said:

"It is a proposal to adapt the law to modern traffic conditions. The suggested law recognizes that the modern motor car may be driven rapidly as well as safely under proper conditions and in law-abiding hands. One of teh existing safety regulations would be changed. The penalties would be made more severe for the driver who violates safe driving rules and at the same time exceeds certain indicated speed limits. Mere speed under safe and proper conditions, and while observing all the rules of the road, would be penalized.

"In other words, not how fast, but how safely, would be made the guiding principle for motorists and enforcement officers."

Being denounced is hardly more offensive than hearing a rival praised.

Everything we have is taxed—even our credulity and patience.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

What the Automobile Means to Us

TWENTY-FOUR ODD MILLION gasoline driven vehicles are on the streets of America today! An average of an automobile for every family in the United States!

"Four wheels and a motor" have speeded up our lives, and made big changes in our mode of living. It is safe to say that the automobile has BETTERED our opportunities and RAISED our standards of living.

With the automobile has come good roads; thousands of miles of hard surface paving. The isolated town is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. Trading territories have become larger, community competition keener. There are many who may decry the fact that the hard roads take business OUT of town. They are overlooking the fact that these hard roads lead BOTH DIRECTIONS. That the same road that leads OUT OF TOWN ALSO leads INTO TOWN! Greater opportunity, with larger markets, exist today for us because of the automobile.

The automobile has passed from the luxury class almost to the necessity class. Many families are finding it economical to have more than one car in the family; in many cases, a car for every member.

As a community, we have been benefited greatly by the increased usage of the automobile. It has widened our scope, and extended our boundaries. It has increased our business and pleasure. On the other hand, it has created keener community competition AS WELL as greater opportunity.

The community that makes the MOST USE OF THE AUTOMOBILE today is the community that will derive the GREATEST BENEFIT from the opportunities it offers and brings to us.

The Automobile offers US greater opportunities and a BIGGER MARKETING AREA. Let's get the most possible benefit for

WASHINGTON HAD HIGH REGARD FOR RELIGIOUS PRACTICE

As a boy, George Washington probably thought as much about religion as did the average normal, healthy boy of that age. As he grew older, he steadily developed a deeply religious turn of mind, according to the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

At the age of twenty-three, George Washington counted the bullet holes in his coat after Braddock's defeat and acknowledged, with commonsense practicality, that a power higher than man had saved him. The Revolutionary war taught him lessons he was too honest to deny, and as a result, Washington's belief in God became the simple faith of a child, confirmed and strengthened by the actual living experience of a man.

The personal record of church attendance, his estimate of the value of religious practices among the people at large; his desire and effort to encourage and to inculcate in the people a spirit of gratitude toward the Deity; and his own expressions of opinion respecting God, give concrete evidence of his faith.

His religious record practically starts with the time when he was commanding the Virginia troops on the western front after Braddock's defeat. At Fort Loudoun, Winchester, at the age of twenty-four, this Colonel of Virginia militia, on Saturday, September 18, 1756, ordered that "the men parade tomorrow morning at beating the long roll, with their arms and ammunition clean and in good order, and to be marched by the Sergeants of the respective companies to the Fort, there to remain until prayers are over."

After his marriage, Washington attended Pohick church at Pohick, Virginia, and later, Christ church, Alexandria, Virginia. Both churches were distant from Mount Vernon, so that it was something of a journey to reach them by coach. An important point established by a close check-up of Washington's church attendance is that throughout his public life, in times of political stress and strain, he went to church oftener than he did in times of national calm and quiet.

On October 16, 1765, there is record of his taking the oath to conform to the doctrine and discipline of the church of England "as by law established," and during the year 1774, when political relations with the mother country were becoming dangerously strained, and no one in the colonies was able to foresee the outcome, he went to church twice, and sometimes three times a month. It was on June 1, 1774, the day the Boston Port Bill went into effect, that he "went to church and fasted all day."

In the hectic days of the outbreak of the Revolutionary war, Washington, in a letter to his wife, stated that he "relied confidently on the providence which has heretofore preserved and been bountiful to me."

In the manly speech in which he accepted the appointment of commander-in-chief of the army, he made reference to God or to heaven; but one month after taking command of the army the matter of prayers and church service appears in the general orders for August 5, 1775, at Cambridge. These orders directed that "the church be cleaned tomorrow and the Revd. Mr. Doyle will perform Divine Service therein at ten o'clock."

Then comes a personal note of soul humility in his letter to Joseph Reed in Janaury, 1776: "I have scarcely emerged from one difficulty," wrote Washington, "before I have plunged into another. How it will end, God in His great goodness will direct. I am thankful for His protection to this time." One thing that speedily became clear in the mind of George Washington was that the military and governmental difficulties of America were not, and could not, be properly met without the help of God. They were too great and America was too feeble, in Washington's judgment, to admit of their successful solution without help from on high, and certainly the verdict of history as to the magnitude of these difficulties has confirmed Washington's political judgment. And also, instead of becoming opinionated, instead of developing an ego, instead of becoming confident of his abilities as he succeeded in surmounting one difficulty after another, George Washington became more and more convinced that the hand of God was in those triumphs and greater and greater became his spiritual humility.

This humility in success and willingness to accept failure without complaint is exemplified at the end of the siege of Boston. The seizure and fortification of Dorchester Height are recalled, and how the British prepared for another Bunker Hill, for they attempted to cross the bay in order to storm the works, and Bunker Hill would have been child's play to the slaughter that would have ensued. It is also recalled that the red-coats were prevented from crossing the water by a sudden and violent storm which lasted so long that by the time it was over Howe felt that the works had become too strong for him, gave over the attempt and evacuated the town. Here is Washington's comment to his brother John on the occurrence: "That this remarkable interposition of Providence is for some wise purpose, I have not a doubt." And this was rather an extraordinary thing to say, for with the preparations made, all contingencies provided for, and with a sufficiency of ammunition, none of which things were present at the affair of Bunker Hill, it is quite reasonable to assume that Howe's attempt would have resulted in the complete annihilation of the British army.

The setting up of the actual machinery of religion in the Continental army is important as a part of Washington's religious record. The Congress authorized the employment of chaplains, after Washington had urged it, and the general orders of July 9, 1776, when the army was in New York City, directed: "That Colonels or commanding officers of each regiment are directed to procure for Chaplains accordingly, persons of good character and exemplary lives. To see that all inferior officers and soldiers pay them a suitable respect and attend carefully upon religious exercises. The blesing and protection of Heaven are at all times necessary, but especially so in times of public distress and danger. The General hopes and trusts, that every officer and man will endeavor so to live and act as becomes a Christian soldier defending the dearest rights and liberties of his country."

In January, 1777, the Continental army for the first time since the siege of Boston, established a permanent encampment base. This was at Morristown, New Jersey, and among the early things attended to was the practice of regular Sunday worship for the troops. On April 12, a Saturday, it was ordered that "All troops in Morristown except the guards, are to attend Divine worship tomorrow at the second bell; the officers commanding the corps, are to take special care to have their men clean and decent, and that they are to march in proper order to the place of worship." Next week it was ordered: "All the troops in town (not on duty) to attend Divine service tomorrow agreeable to the orders of the 12th instant." The convenience of a church building was an element in Morristown and the army paid due observance to Sunday. It may be noted, however, that only the troops in the town itself were ordered to church, for no building would have been large enough to hold the army encamped in the vicinity.

When the encampment was shifted to Middlebrook the well-known order against profanity was issued on May 31. Washington characterized it as the "foolish and scandalous practice of profane swearing," and added: "As a means to abolish this and every other species of immorality, Brigadiers are enjoyned to take effectual care, to have divine service duly performed in their respective brigades." At Middlebrook, also, on June 28, the orders were as follows: "All Chaplains are to perform Divine service tomorrow, and on every succeeding Sunday, with their respective brigades and regiments, where the situation will possibly admit of it. And the Commanding officers of corps are to see that they attend themselves with officers of all ranks setting the example. The Commander-in-chief expects an exact compliance with this order, and that it be observed in the future as an invariable rule of practice. And every neglect will be considered not only as a breach of orders, but a disregard to decency, virtue and religion."

On the day after the surrender of Cornwallis, October 20, 1781, Washington's greatest military triumph of the war, he issued this order: "Divine service is to be performed tomorrow in the several brigades and divisions. The Commander-in-Chief earnestly recommends that the troops not on duty should universally attend with that seriousness of deportment and gratitude of heart which the recognition of such reiterated and astonishing interpositions of Providence demands of us."

Here are Washington's words on the connection between religion and government as taken from his Farewell Address: "Morality is a necessary spring of popular government . . . let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

On his deathbed, after nearly twenty-four hours of struggle for breath, he placed the final seal of courageous manhood upon his life and went to his Maker with his brave faith unshaken. "I felt from the first," he whispered, "that this disorder would prove fatal . . . but I am not afraid to go."

HELP COSMOPOLITAN PEOPLE MAKE TELEPHONE CALLS

"Was Wollen sie, mein Herr?"
"Oui, M'sieur, j'ecoute."
"Si, Signor, parlo Italiano."

San Francisco's own League of Nations speaking.

The miniature League is now gathered in one spot on Grant avenue. It is made up of forty-nine inter-city telephone operators who speak fourteen languages and they stand ready to help San Francisco's cosmopolitan people put through a telephone call between San Francisco and any of the twenty-nine nations now interconnected by 91 per cent of the world's telephones, according to Lyle M. Brown, manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

"San Francisco is one of the most cosmopolitan cities of the world," said Mr. Brown. "When a member of the city's foreign colonies desires to call his home land and his lack of knowledge of English prevents quick and active service by the telephone girl, she notifies the long distance chief operator, Miss Catherine H. Walsh, who ascertains the man's native tongue and calls upon her League of Nations for assistance.

"If the man is Finnish, Miss Ina Ahoa takes charge of the call and obtains all the data necessary for a satisfactory connection. For Greeks, Miss Kathlene Eliades is ready to help; for the French, it is Dora Chaudet; for the Italians, Victoria Fanza; for Russians, it is Alice Popova. The Danes find Edith Bjerring easy to talk to. Abelina Buys takes care of the Dutch. Others represented are Armenian, Hebrew, Spanish, Austrian, Portuguese, German, Bohemian and Chinese.

"Out of hundreds of inter-city operators serving San Francisco day and night, one-sixth speak foreign languages in addition to English. This record for cosmopolitanism in so small a group is believed to be equalled by few cities anywhere."

CONSERVATION OF NATURAL RESOURCES TO BE DISCUSSED

Conservation of California's natural resources will be the principal topic of discussion at a meeting of the conservation commission of the American Legion to be held in San Francisco on March 22. Bert Meek, chairman of the commission, will preside and members of the commission from all sections of California will attend.

During a recent fit of sneezing, a bullet that had lodged in his head for fifteen years was spat out by Arturo Dente, of Havana, Cuba.

VETERANS' BONDS TO BE SOLD IN MARCH

The $20,000,000 Veterans' bonds voted at the last election will be sold by the state treasurer, March 5, according to advices received by James K. Fisk, state adjutant of the American Legion, from George M. Stout, secretary of the Veterans' Welfare Board.

This means, according to Stout, that beginning with the month of March, there will be invested in California over twenty million dollars in veterans' farms and homes, furnishing employment to hundreds of our citizens, and to an appreciable extent alleviating the unemployment situation amongst building tradesmen. Furthermore, this program will add generally to the building and material sales, as well as to sales of real estate.

Summarizing, it will mean adding to California prosperity by the building and creation of new homes to the extent of $20,000,000 for over 4,000 veterans. It will mean the sale of over 4,000 lots, costing not less than $5,000,000, and the building of over 4,000 homes, costing in excess of $15,000,000. This $15,000,000 represents the cost of labor and building material, which will be distributed over the state without restriction as to any district or section. The $20,000,000 investment program of the Veterans' Welfare Board will require approximately two years to consummate.

The success of the $20,000,000 bond act can be interpreted as a great tribute to the veterans of the state of California, who have worked out their own plan of veteran and without cost to the taxpayers, who have for the third time approved the method of granting the privilege of the use of the state's credit for this purpose. It is also interpreted as a vote of confidence for the able manner in which the Veterans' Welfare Board of the state has administered this tremendous fund to the satisfaction of the voters, and the veterans for whom it was created to serve.

LEGION CHILD WELFARE COMMISSION TO MEET

The Child Welfare Commission of the California Department of the American Legion will hold a meeting in San Francisco on March 21, to discuss ways and means of providing for the future welfare of the children of deceased veterans. The meeting will be presided over by Edwin H. Melvin, of Los Gatos. Members of the commission planning to attend include Wilbur Gett, Santa Ana; Judge W. C. Guerin, San Dimas; Carroll F. Byrd, Willows; Dr. G. A. Coffey, Ventura; J. W. Colwell, Garden Grove; Dr. H. G. Watters, Watsonville; Catherine C. E. Reardon, Stockton; and Ernest W. Bain, South Gate.

NEED BETTER, NOT MORE LAWS

This country is surfeited with laws. There are so many statutes that it is utterly impossible for the average citizen to be conversant with them, even superficially. This superfluity of statutory law tends to lower general respect for law. It should be the purpose of all legislative bodies to keep down to the minimum the number of legislative enactments.

Fewer laws, and laws of better quality, is the supreme need of the hour throughout the nation, says the Pasadena Star-News.

Charged with stealing three Bibles, Mrs. Porter Chase, of Pittsfield, Md., was fined $5 and costs in court.

ELEVEN STATES HAVE NO SPEED LIMIT LAW

Eleven states have abolished a maximum speed limit for automobiles, according to a report received by the National Automobile Club. The motorist is instructed to "let his conscience be his guide," and to drive at any speed so long as it is "reasonable and proper," considering road and traffic conditions. States in which this type of legislation prevails are: Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Montana, Tennessee, Vermont, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

We have, on the other extreme, Massachusetts, with a 20-mile an hour maximum, while Missouri struggles along with a 25-mile limit.

Eight states keep pace with California in making the limit 40 miles an hour. They are Pennsylvania, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey, South Dakota, and Washington.

Eleven states consider 45 miles an hour a good driving speed. In this category are Alabama, Illinois, Louisiana, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Mexica, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, and Virginia.

States having a 35-mile maximum are Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island and West Virginia.

A 30-mile limit is imposed by New York, Mississippi, Utah, and the District of Columbia.

Nevada is the only state that legalizes the speed most commonly noted on the open road—50 miles per hour.

ONLY ONE COMPLAINED

Abe owned a well known race horse, for which Ikey offered him $10,000. Abe accepted the offer and a check, promising to deliver the horse the next day.

Over night, however, the horse died. But Abe could not bear to lose his bargain, so he cashed the check and sent the horse on.

He heard nothing further and did his best to avoid Ikey. Unfortunately the day came when they met face to face. Abe took the bull by the horns and asked Ikey what became of the horse.

"Vell," said Ike, "ven I found it vos dead, seeing that everyone knew vat a wonderful horse it was, I raffled it, and 25 people bought tickets at $500 each."

"But," said Abe, "didn't anyone grumble?"

"Only the man who won it," replied Ikey, "so I gave him his money back."—Forbes Magazine.

FIRE MARSHALS MEET

The Fire Marshals of Daly City held a meeting last Wednesday night with the Chief of Police, Deputy Fire Marshals, the Fire Chief and two assistant Chiefs, in reference to their duties at fires, such as handling the traffic, keeping people out of the buildings, driving over the hose and up to the hydrants and directly to fires, which interferes with the police and the firemen at a fire. If the public would observe the above mentioned rules, and obey the officers, and stand back from fires, it would give the firemen a better chance to get at the fire. These meetings are held once a month by the Fire Marshals and deputies.

After church services Sunday night at Grace Presbyterian church, the young people invited those present to the Social parlor, where refreshments were served. They are planning on similar surprises occasionally.

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1931 NUMBER 31

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Who Will Raise It?

Prof.: "The window should be opened. (Louder.) Mr. Smith, will you open it?"

Smith (waking up): "I'll open it for four bits."

How Cruel of Her

Cherrie: "Would you say yes if I proposed?"

Thelma: "Sure I would, if you proposed going to a movie."

Do you keep your house in good repair? Nothing deteriorates faster than a neglected house. It's like a bad tooth. Every time the least little break is left unmended, it brings trouble.

Aberdeen, the Coal of satisfaction.

A Cutting Remark

And then there's the Scotchman who accidentally spilled some iodine. To keep it from going to waste he had to cut his finger.

He: "Let's get tied."
She: "Let's not."

Ring us up when you need Building Material.

Culture

"I hear your son's at college."
"Yep."
"How's he doing?"
"Oh, pretty good, I guess. He is taking three courses. I've just paid out ten dollars for Latin, ten dollars for Greek, and a hundred dollars for Scotch."

She: "Do you think it's unlucky to get married on Friday?"
He: "Of course! Why should Friday be an exception?"

You Know

The jury had been dead-locked for two days. The foreman of the jury came to the door and said to the bailiff:
"Send in eleven dinners and a bale of hay."

Yes, we sell paints and oils—the best.

"I don't mind having 'rings on my fingers,'" he said, as he limped from the dance, "but hang me if I can stand for 'belles on my toes.'"

Are all fishermen liars, or are all liars fishermen?
